

Public Comments to Assist in Reviewing and Identifying Unfair Trade Practices and Initiating All Necessary Actions to Investigate Harm from Non-Reciprocal Trade Agreements

Docket ID: USTR-2025-0001

March 11, 2025

Submitted by Trade Justice Education Fund on Behalf of 1,584 Individuals

Thank you for the opportunity to comment on harmful international trade practices as pursuant to both the “America First Trade Policy Presidential Memorandum” and the “Presidential Memorandum on Reciprocal Trade and Tariffs.” These comments focus on the United States’ trade relationship with Mexico, which by many metrics has only worsened since President Donald Trump signed the U.S.-Mexico-Canada Agreement (USMCA) in January 2020.

At that time, President Trump claimed his pact was the most “balanced trade agreement in history” and would benefit our country “greatly.” He promised it would bring “jobs pouring into the United States” and would also be “an especially great victory for our farmers.” Instead, the U.S trade deficit in goods with Mexico has increased dramatically under the USMCA — rising from $101.8 billion in 2019 to $171.8 billion in 2024, according to data from the Office of the U.S. Trade Representative website.

These numbers reflect the ongoing movement of good-paying jobs from communities across the United States to Mexico under the USMCA so that employers can take advantage of continued labor rights violations, abysmally-low wages and lax pollution controls.

When reconsidering U.S. trade rules with Mexico, we urge you to please:

- Create a new high-wages, high-standards trade relationship. The mandated six-year review of the USMCA is the perfect opportunity to renegotiate the pact in favor of working people instead of big corporate interests. Existing USMCA labor and environmental standards must be strengthened and their enforcement mechanisms must be significantly improved and better funded in order to lessen companies’ incentive to move jobs to Mexico to take advantage of worker rights abuses and the ability to pollute relatively freely. A renegotiated pact must also establish minimum wages for workers in key sectors before products can be imported into the U.S. under the USMCA, so that job offshorers lose the ability to profit from unfair and unbalanced wage discrepancies. In addition to lessening the ability to exploit Mexico workers at the expense of working families across North America, raising wages for Mexican workers could also expand markets for U.S.-made exports.
- Recognize and address roots causes of economic displacement and migration. President Trump has made a career off of demonizing immigrants and blaming Mexico for migration, while ignoring the role that U.S. trade agreements continue to play in enabling the agricultural dumping that has driven millions of small farmers in Mexico and across Latin America off their land and many into the migration stream. The USMCA renegotiation must address these and other root causes of economic displacement, including not only through better labor, environmental and wage provisions, but via new agricultural provisions that safeguard countries' rights to ensure farmers receive fair prices for their goods and that agricultural demand is met while dumping is discouraged.

- Utilize tariffs to support good-paying jobs, not to bully our allies or cut taxes for the rich. Tariffs should be used in conjunction with other industrial policy tools to support good-paying jobs and supply chain diversification in the U.S. and across North America. They should not be used to bully other countries into militarizing their borders or handing over their territory, nor should tariffs be used as an excuse to cut taxes for the rich. Care must also be taken to ensure that calls for “reciprocal tariffs” by billionaire advisors within the Trump administration are not ultimately used to incentivize an overall lowering of tariffs and more quote-unquote “free trade.”

For the U.S.-Mexico trading relationship to finally benefit working people rather than corporate interests, more attention must be given to ending transnational corporations' exploitation of Mexican workers, farmers and the environment. Ending their ability to do so would be a win-win for working families across the continent. The reason that hasn't happened to date is the oversized roll the corporations have played in shaping U.S. trade policy, and the ongoing willingness of politicians to scapegoat immigrants and foreign nations rather than challenge corporate power.
